"TIME OUT FOR GINGER" was a refreshing Comedy in three acts written by Ronald Alexander. It took place in a town, almost any town, about the size of Kermit. The time is the Fall of the year-- Football Season. The story involved a family: father, mother, and three daughters and the problems with which they were confronted when the youngest daughter, inspired by a speech made by her banker father in a school assembly, kicks over the traces of convention and decides to make a try for her place in the world of football. The situations were so very real that they could happen to almost anyone.

The Senior-Faculty basketball game, sponsored by the Yellow Jacket staff, will always be remembered as the hard fought game whose funds were for the March of Dimes. This exciting game was a contest between the Bopsters and the Grandpa's. The coaches for the Grandpa's (Seniors) were Mary Tom Rainwater and Mary Etta Lawrence, the cheerleaders were Sue Wallace, Sallie Raines, Bill Waddell, and Wesley Godfrey. The coach for the Bopsters (Faculty) was Johnnie Roberts, the cheerleaders were Mary Louise Parramore, Ollie Jo Wester, Mary Smith, and Floydean Wilburn. The officials were Rita McCurley and Pat Langdon.

Memories travel back to the annual Baptist Banquet, in honor of the Seniors. The theme was Alice in Wonderland and was carried out very beautifully with flowers, favors and the Mad-Hatter, Rev. Joe Allen. A very enjoyable evening for everyone.
