

Superintendent's message

Today as never before America is depending upon her strong brave young men and women for the security of the United States, American ideals, and ways of life. The youth who are in our schools today will be entrusted with the responsibility of sustaining democracy in the future. There has never been a time in the history of the world when so great a responsibility and privilege has been assigned to the youth of the land. To cope with these responsibilities the youth must possess character. He must have the fundamental qualities of soul and heart to command him. He must be a good citizen and enlist others in national good citizenship. With the young people of our nation endowed with these qualities, the door of opportunity will be open to them and the future of our country will be in capable hands.

Principal's message

When the present international situation is solved by the victorious Allies, then, more than ever before, there will be needed individuals and groups of individuals with a faculty for intelligent citizenship. I firmly believe that you, as Kermit High School students, exemplify the very qualities of cooperation, friendliness, loyalty, and acceptance of responsibility so necessary in a Democratic society.

Each of you has contributed something to your high school, and it is the earnest hope of the faculty that Kermit High School has contributed something to your character that will distinguish you throughout long lives of usefulness to your country and your God.

Sincerely,
