

Students build a West Texas size snowman.

Eating snow proves to be an interesting pastime.

After eating it and playing in it, they began fighting with it.

Time for Snowplay

It seems like only once in a lifetime that it snows in Kermit. When snow did come, the students turned back the calendar several years and acted like small children with their snowball fights, their attempts at building snowmen and their unending efforts to catch the snow as it came down.

