SENIORSSENIORSSENIORSSENIORS

Finally, the time has come for the closing of twelve grades of school and actually the end of one phase of life. And what can be said on the behalf of the seniors that is going to capture each one's unique feelings?

The majority says, "I can't wait to get out.", and it is true, but there also is a little more to it than just getting out. There will never be another opportunity to meet so many different people the same age quite as easily. Weekly frustrations cannot be taken out at the Friday afternoon pep rally. Never again will there be another person quite as funny as the clown who sat next to you in Civics.

Although some may disagree, school has served its purpose and that is to educate. No one has ever said school is all "fun and games", and an ideal institution, but it has made available some valuable opportunities. The required courses of reading, writing, and arithmetic have of course taught us, but probably the most useful lesson of all is derived from the chance to grow up with more types of people with different backgrounds. From this we learn how to get along and compromise, on the most part, with the mass.

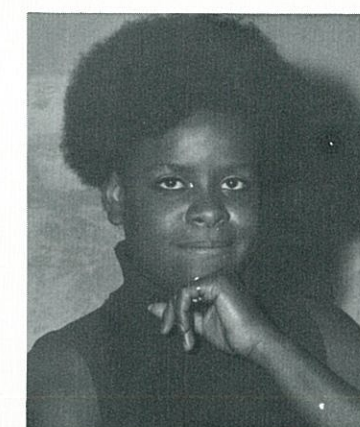

So, when the times, good or bad, are relived, they will be different for each of us. That is what is so special about leaving the years behind.
