WHEN I RETIRE

When I retire, I'll have a goal
To spend time at a fishing hole,
If someone just will hold the pole, when I retire.

To reach me, you'll just have to call;
The odds that I'll be up are small;
Some days I won't get up at all, when I retire.

When tempted to get out of bed,
I'll check to see if I am dead.
If not, I'll take a nap instead, when I retire.

As time permits, without much strain,
I'll check my mail, with cold disdain,
Before I chuck it down the drain, when I retire.

Outside classes will be fun.
I'll have my say and then I'll run.
What of homework? I'll take on none, when I retire.

Tutoring, I just might do,
If fees are right and hours are few,
And if I take a notion to, when I retire.

And when I die, should God permit,
I will not taper off a bit;
My epitaph will read, "He quit, when he expired."
