THE HOW AND WHY CLUB

"Hey, gang, come on! Do you have the shovel to dig the ole Indians up with? All aboard! A field trip! Did you bring the dissecting set or the jar to put the pond scum in? All Aboard!" And the old school bus rattles off containing a dozen or so young scientists on a field trip.

Although the field trips have been few, we have certainly enjoyed them. Many things, including our lack of knowledge of the community, have prevented us from making these trips that are enjoyed by all the How and Why Club members. Certain members remember a day in the Sand Hills when Miss Cearley led her flock to gather Indian relics. The relics were few but the day was not spent unhappily by those who were fortunate to go.

Perhaps you would like to know the derivation of our name. Well, that is simple enough. Just ask a teacher how many questions a day she is asked! Miss Cearley is not an exception to this rule, in fact, the questions asked were so many in her department and in this club that we named this the How and Why Club.
