

To celebrate a birthday we could bake a cake, have a party, blow out candles, make a wish, or kindle fireworks. For our Country's two hundredth birthday these seem a trifle. Instead, may we count our blessings, reaffirm our faith, and review the principles on which our great nation was founded. Make this birthday year a year in which we pledge our loyalty and show that we enjoy . . .

.....Life