

▲ "Can she do it?" Marti Salazar tries to cram an impossible amount of food down her throat as Tracy Harris and Shelly McDonald look on in total disbelief. She went on to drop the food down the hatch.

◆ Bryan Kenyon shows some massive hair loss. He was one of several students to come down with mange this school year.

NECESSARILY NOT THE YEARBOOK

During the first few months of school, there were many big events that affected us in some way. Even before the year started we had a rainstorm that left half of us floating down the streets. A reported seven inches of rain fell, and several houses were turned into swimming pools.

Rain was not the only problem. The mosquitos brought by the rain were tormenting the whole town. Mosquitos as big as flies were draining all of us of our life — sustaining blood.

After a few months of intense heat and high humidity, the mosquitos finally left. This great event was followed by a couple of weeks of nice bearable weather.

As the last mosquito departed, we were plagued by yet another series of rainstorms. This rain came from the North, and it was cold. Average temperatures were between 50 and 70 degrees that proved for a rather dreary week.

As you can see, the weather was the major news story this year. But that's not necessarily true, because this isn't necessarily the news.

Sean Beeler and Kerry Dennis show us all the meaning of a Wink High School sniglet. The sniglet was "DUH!!!"

Runt Bishop and Joely Mohler are all smiles. Ever wonder why?

Tommy Fry takes a shot to the mouth. This boxing match with the fork was too much for Tommy as you can tell by the black eye.