Brian Nichols attempts to get the ball to the green on the short hole number five. Brian learned that the ball doesn't always go where it is supposed to. Garland Franklin is trying to get the ball down the fareway and to the green. Unfortunately, the photographer made him nervous and the ball only went about 15 yards.

Terry Warren tees-off on hole number eight. Terry scored very well in the Wink Golf Tournament.

Christina Rios gives Kathy Kemp some putting support. Kathy was the only left-handed golfer on the team.

Terry Warren takes a little advice from an old pro. Terry's dad helped him a lot with his golf game and with parental support.

Shooting For The Green!

Kathy Kemp reaches down to pull her ball out of the hole. This was one of the many times that Kathy had to do this.

Shelly McDonald putts for par. As it is most of the time with Shelly, her aim was good, and she sunk the ball.

Golf is a very unusual sport. All you usually do is walk 18 holes of golf a day and hit a little orange ball to a little bitty hole. Except for the walk, golf is a fun sport. Golf lingo contains some strange words such as four, par, birdy, bogie, eagle, tee-off, putt, slice, hook, drive, and a few others. Some people think golf is a real difficult sport, but it's not as long as you put in the practice you would for any other sport. Many people, once they reach a certain age, won't run track, play tennis, or many other sports, but people of all ages play golf. You ought to just try playing golf. You never know it might turn out to be alot of fun you never expected to find from a long club and a little orange ball.
