

Holidays: Celebrate Good Times

Through the first fourteen weeks of school, life here was normal, and attention was pointed towards sports. Football and volleyball were going good, and the weather was always nice. Then all of a sudden, football and volleyball stopped, the weather started to turn cold, and attention turned towards the holidays.

When it was time for Thanksgiving and Christmas to come around, the weather really didn't seem proper. Then about three days before the Thanksgiving weekend, the leaves finally started to fall, and the temperature dropped, making the weather fit the holiday mood. Everyone seemed ready for a break and took Thanksgiving day and the weekend off very willingly.

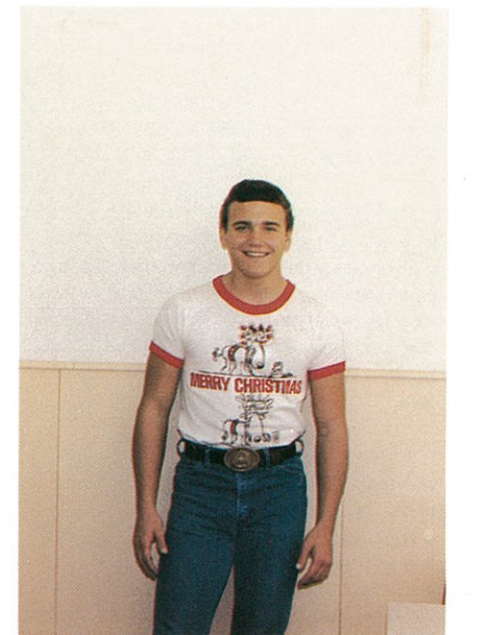

After Thanksgiving there were three days of school until the Christmas holidays. During these days in school, students decorated a tree in the high school hall, the band went to Kermit to march in the Christmas parade, and it snowed in Wink for the first time of the year. All of this helped provide a proper setting for the holidays. The few days of school before the Christmas break were really just days to get ready for the days off. On the day that school let out, all of the classes had their own Christmas parties, and the start of the holiday was official.

Christmas and the New Year's holidays came and went as planned, on January 4 classes resumed, and the weather began to be warmer. It seemed as though nothing was changed, but everyone had gotten a break and was ready to start again.

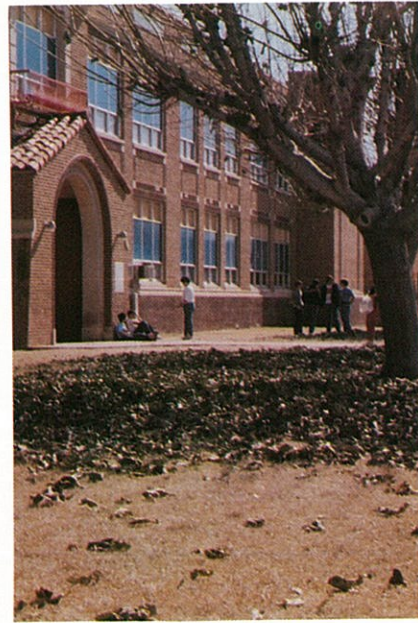

Wink students participate in decorating the tree in the high school hall. The Christmas vacation was enjoyed by all students because it provided a well needed break.

Jerry Curtis is showing off his Christmas spirit with his lighted shirt. Jerry has always been known to stand out in a crowd.

The elementary students have fun during Halloween. It seemed as though everything was orange and black during these times.

We see that the leaves, while still green, have fallen to the ground. Through the end of fall and the first of winter and trees were full.

In years past Santa has been the main attraction in the parade, and is again this year. Here, we caught Santa waving at the crowd.

The band does a good job and is impressive as they march. They were invited to the Kermit Christmas parade to help entertain the crowd.

In the snow, some eighth grade girls are attempting to build a snowman. This day at school was fun for everyone because it provided a little excitement in the school.
