

The Saga Continues

The saga refers to life at the Wink schools. It seems that much is the same, but actually there are many changes. Some seem to have affected the general attitude among the students. For instance, 1987 was the first year that we began the school year by purchasing yearbooks. In the past, yearbooks were purchased at the end of the previous year, but were not complete due to deadlines. Now the yearbook includes all spring activities and is a total picture of the entire school year. The Shawna Crawford benefits, which have included a car wash, rock-a-thon, and golf tournament have brought the students and the community together to work together for a single cause. This attitude has carried over into Wink sports with the idea of "Can Do". Generally, "Can Do" means that nothing is impossible, and that we can do anything.

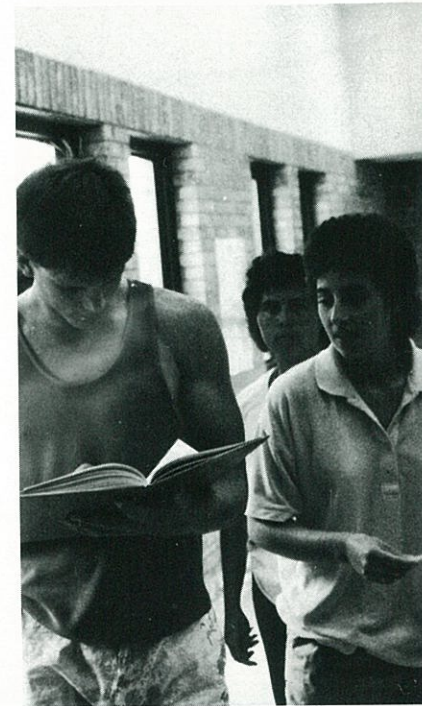

Some things are the same in our school, but in a way they are changed. Cafeteria food is still cafeteria food, but this year there have been some different types of dishes served. The food really isn't stereotypical of cafeteria food.

Computers are still in use, but over the summer the school bought a new computer system, the WICAT 300. This system includes 64 terminals at which as many as 64 different students can work on as many as 64 different tasks. Each student from K-12 will have a chance to work on the computer. The purpose of the WICAT system is to create a learning center that improves student performance and teaches more effectively. Overall, the new computer system adds a new dimension in learning for students and frees the teachers for more individual teaching.

The weather at the beginning of the school year was indimate, causing allergy related illnesses and also a great increase in absenteeism as compared to that of previous years. Even though this year is a little different, students continue to anticipate the best as done in years before.

THE SAGA CONTINUES .....

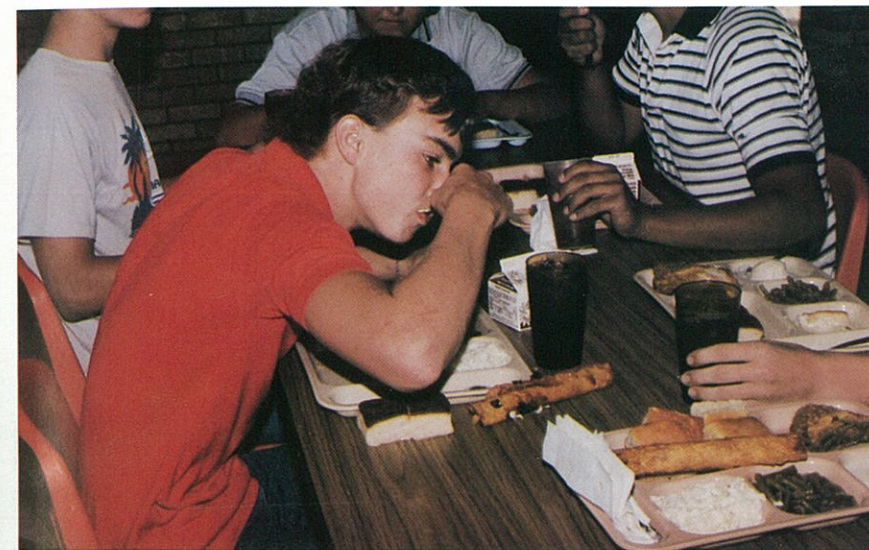

Danny and Amy preview the 1987 Wildcat. Buying yearbooks was a different way to start the school year.

Coach Crawford and Shawna take a stroll around the rock-a-thon to thank participants for their support. This and other benefits were a big success for the Shawna Crawford fund.

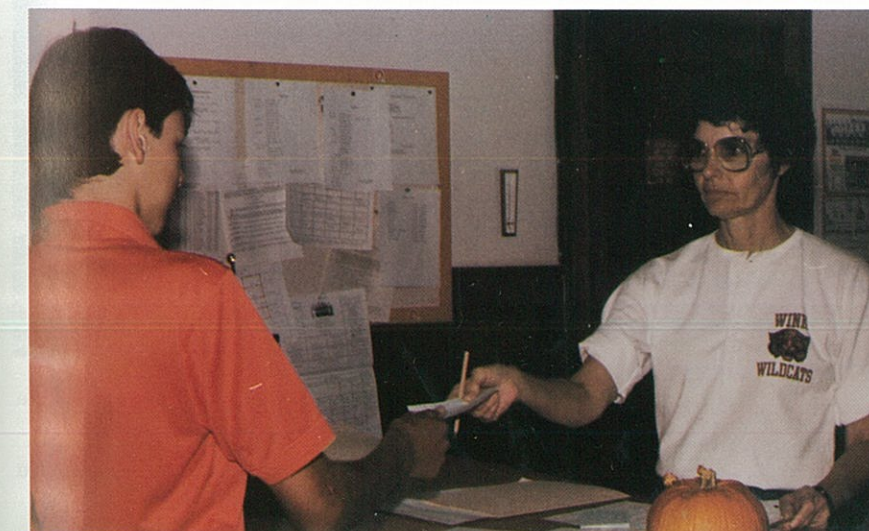

Students are looking for the education of the future with the computers. Computers were introduced in the Wink Schools this year as a complete learning center for all.

Mrs. Baker and Mr. and Mrs. Criswell take a break from teaching to be human. Oh, to be a teacher. They rook togetherness to the extreme.

This sign is the last thing football players see before entering the playing field. It was placed by the gate to inspire a positive attitude.

J.R. Glenn is in the office to get his absentee slip. There were many absences at the beginning of the school year, but there were also some good excuses.

Troy Ratliff eats heartily. UMMM!!! Tastes like home-cooking, bur of course, Mom's the cook.
