Lady Wildcats . . . Who Could Ask For Anything More

The Lady Wildcats of '87 had a good but rough season. They had a lot of obstacles to overcome throughout the year. One of the obstacles was getting a new coach. Getting used to a new coach was somewhat difficult, but they handled the change with ease because Coach Harris was more than a coach, she was a friend. She was also well respected for her knowledge of the game. There was also a new attitude in the volleyball team. This attitude was a winning attitude. The players wanted to win more than ever because of rumors going around about the team not being as good as the teams in the past. Despite the rumors, the Lady Wildcats managed to have a good season.

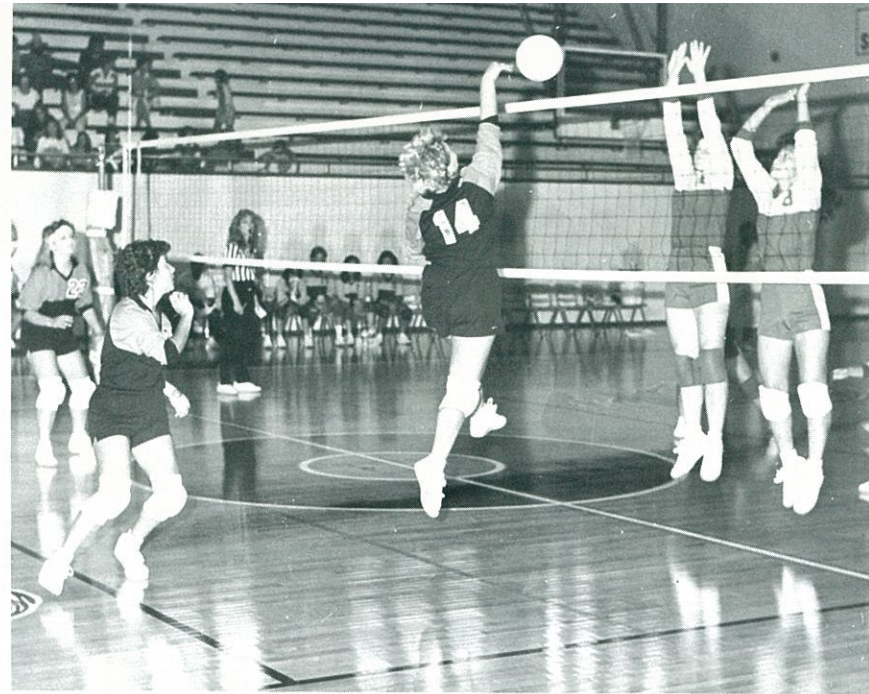

Along with the good times there were also some bad times. This year there were more injuries than there ever have been in one season. They were minor injuries but they came at the crucial part of the season, right before district.

Another disappointing time for the team was the loss of the District Championship. The loss was disappointing but in a way helped the team be more competitive. That loss made the team decide to carry volleyballs everywhere they went to think of volleyball. Teachers didn't like the idea of the volleyballs because they got in the way and distracted the students during class. In a way the volleyballs helped to strengthen the Lady Wildcats game.

Overall the Lady Wildcats had a good season. They proved many people wrong with their ability and with their new coach. They also overcame injuries throughout the year and still managed to be friends when it was all over.

"Old Maid" is one of the things the Lady Cats did to occupy themselves on several of their long trips. When it came time to play, the Cats didn't play like "Old Maids."

Nancy and Alisa go up together for the block at precisely the right time. Kristyl and Veronica watched impatiently.

Mrs. Baker observes Alisa as she attempts to wrap Veronica's ankle. Veronica was only one of the many team members who had ankle injuries during the season.

Kristyl goes up for a dink. She attempted to fake her opponent.

The J.V. Volleyball team had a rough season. They started out good but ran into some problems. The main problem the J.V. faced was most of the team quit throughout the season and left the team with only six players at the end of the season. But the six remaining players showed many people what teamwork, dedication and being a Wildcat really meant.

Despite the problems, this season was a learning experience for the team. They practiced hard everyday and played hard every game. Each player strived all season to try and earn a position on varsity next year.
