

Shiny, Happy People

Although the bell rings at 8:00, the teachers' day starts way before the tardy bell rings and keeps going way after the last student has left. Many weekends are spent at school for those teachers who need to prepare for the work week.

In addition to their teaching duties, all of those teachers sacrifice a great deal of their time to sponsor extracurricular activities including sports, UIL literary events, and student organizations.

New faculty members include Chrissie Ethridge, English; Paula Lockhart, history and geography; and Renetta O'Quinn, English and journalism. In addition to academic classes, these teachers work with One-Act play, volleyball and basketball, and the school newspaper, respectively.

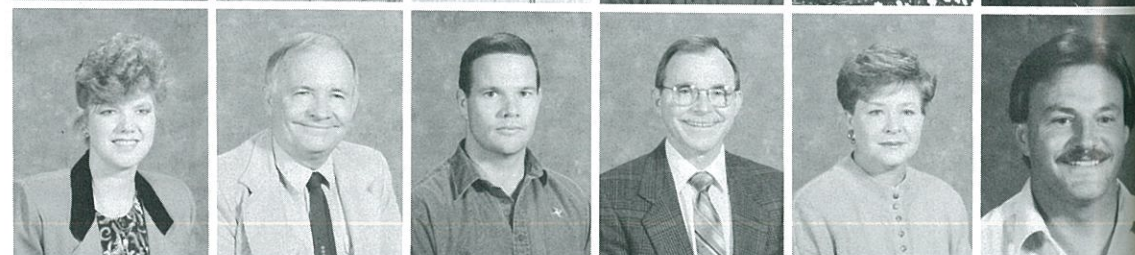

None of these faculty members seem to care that there is a skeleton tap dancing on Mrs. Baker's head.

The behind-the-scenes staff deserves a lot of credit for all of its hard work. The contributions of these people insure that students develop mentally, physically, and emotionally. Because of the atmosphere created by these people, the school is a safe and pleasant place to learn. They take pride in their work and should be commended for a job well done.
