

Angela Stephens, Melissa Shakelford, Jolee Hanna, Michelle Harbin and Melissa Garcia leave the band hall, carefully watching their steps, during a mid-December snowfall that produced an accumulation exceeding eleven inches.

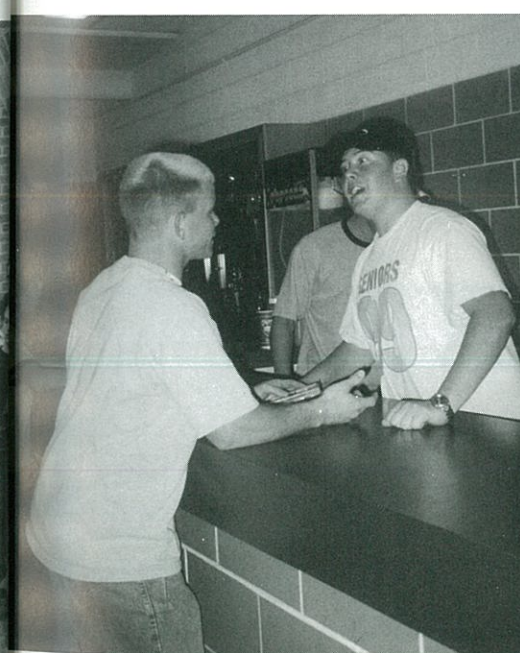

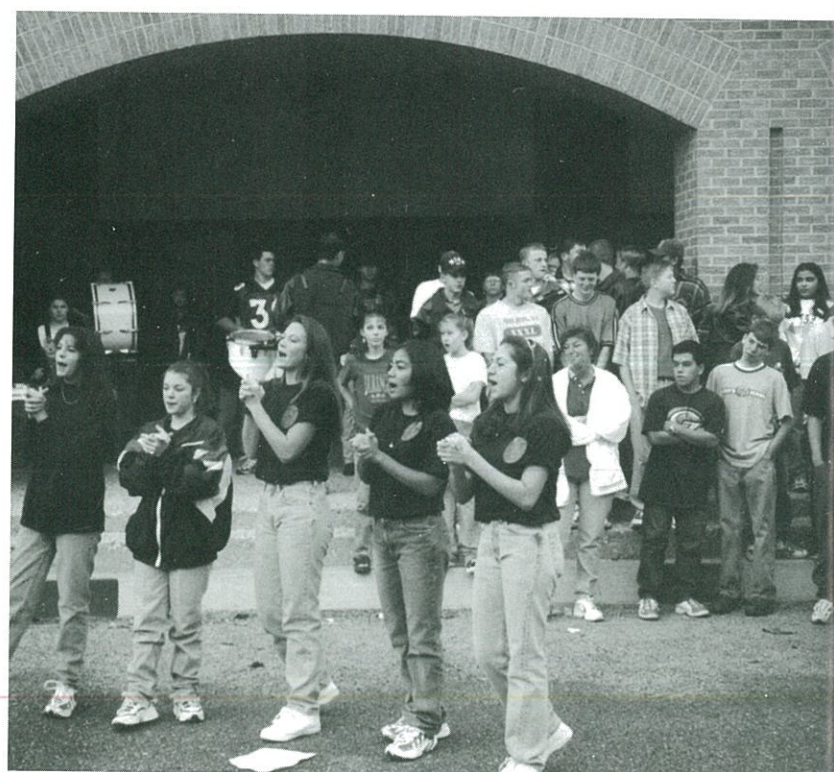

Junior Patrick Voyles and senior Dustin Loftin work together to build a shining gateway for the junior-senior prom.

Senior Casie Slaughter takes a break after athletics with junior Maria Villalpando.

The Baad Cat Band, cheerleaders, and the rest of the student body unite in support of the state bound Lady Cat volleyball team.

12 Classes

Senior Michael Berta works hard in the concession stand to earn money for the senior trip while sophomore W.E. Linkler waits patiently for his change.

In some schools, seniors spend their year as head honchos running roughshod over campus. Knowing that graduation looms not far away, many even become afflicted with the dreaded senioritis. This disease gives them a feeling of utmost superiority and keeps underclassmen at bay. Such is not the case at Wink High School. Here a tradition of camaraderie and fellowship exists among the classes. Upperclassmen are positive role models and mentors for younger schoolmates. Freshmen, sophomores, juniors and seniors mingle together in a harmony that promotes true Wildcat Spirit.

Classes